

Mississippi's Teddy Bear

Language Arts Curriculum

3rd Grade

Mississippi's place in the history of an iconic animal, toy, and president

Addressing literacy, social science, and science education needs

Name: _____

Mississippi's Teddy Bear

Among the trees and river cane, hunters were moving. It was 1902 in Mississippi. The way was tough along the Little Sunflower River. The soil was damp and soft. The air was still. The men were watchful.

Some had journeyed far from home to find the quiet predator. The hunters' prey was bigger than they were. It could weigh 200 to 350 pounds. Its fur was black, so it was hard to see.

The horses and riders followed the hunting dogs deeper into the forest.

Before 1902, Mississippi had many forests and swamps. They were home to wild animals. There was habitat for black bears, rabbits, turkeys, and songbirds. Animals like bears ate acorns, berries, grasses, and leaves. The trees and cane were shelter. The river and swamps gave water. Native Americans came here to hunt animals to feed their families.

Later, many people from the East and North moved to Mississippi. Men used the trees to make houses and barns. Farmers cut trees to make places for corn and other crops. Swamp water was drained to make space for more people. Wild animals were hunted to feed hungry families. Some animals were killed because people were afraid of them.

By 1902, there were few wild animals near the Little Sunflower River. There was not much habitat left for them. Many animals had been taken for food. Black bears, red wolves, and mountain lions had been killed or scared away.

The hunters moving near the Little Sunflower River saw only their hunting dogs. There was no sign of their prey.

President Theodore Roosevelt was one of the men near the river. He loved hunting and being outdoors. Wild animals avoided people, and Roosevelt enjoyed trying to find them. He did not want a hunted animal to suffer, so he shot his gun carefully. Now President Roosevelt was on an exciting trip. He was in Mississippi to hunt a big animal—the black bear!

Teddy Roosevelt had come from Washington, D.C., to a camp along the river. He and the men told campfire stories of past hunting trips. They laughed and told jokes. Everyone was excited about the adventure.

After three days of hunting, the men were unhappy. There used to be many black bears in Mississippi. By 1902, bears were rare. President Roosevelt had not seen any. What if none were found on his hunting trip? What would the president do?

Name: _____

Suddenly, the dogs howled loudly. They had found the scent of a bear! Holt Collier, a famous bear hunter, called out, "Follow me!" Men on horses fought through the brush to follow the dogs.

Time went by. The hunting party had ridden many miles. No bear was found. Maybe the dogs had lost the scent? Tired and hungry, Teddy and his friends went back to the camp to eat. But Holt Collier followed the dogs and the bear into the swampy forest.

Finally, the dogs saw the bear. It was old and hurt. Holt Collier blew his bugle to call the men. While he waited, he caught the bear with his rope. He tied the bear to a tree so it could not run away.

When Theodore Roosevelt arrived, he and his men looked around. The dogs were barking. The bear was tied. Holt Collier was waiting. The men shouted, "Let the president shoot the bear!" President Roosevelt stepped forward.

Reading Comprehension

Answer these questions about the story on a separate piece of paper.

1. Where does the story take place?
2. Why were bears rare in 1902?
3. Who found the bear? What evidence from the text supports your answer?
4. Pretend you are President Roosevelt. What would you do next? How do you feel?
5. What would YOU have done?

Continue reading the story below.

President Roosevelt looked again at the old, hurt bear. He shook his head. "No. I refuse to shoot. End its pain." The men obeyed his order.

Teddy Roosevelt did not think it was right to shoot this bear. It was not fair. The bear could not hide or get away. President Roosevelt liked adventure and hunting. He also wanted to be fair to the animals he hunted.

News of the Mississippi bear hunt quickly spread. Newspaper writers wrote stories about it. One person drew a cartoon about the story. People were proud of the choice made by their president.

One day in New York, Mr. Michtom saw the cartoon about Teddy Roosevelt and the bear. He had some stuffed bears in his toy store. They looked like the bear in the cartoon. This gave him an idea! Mr. Michtom wrote a letter to President Roosevelt. He asked, "May I name my toy bears after you? May I call them Teddy's bears?" Theodore Roosevelt agreed.

Since this time, stuffed toy bears have been known as teddy bears. It all started with a hunting trip along the river in Mississippi in 1902.

For the Teacher

Additional reading comprehension questions:

1. Why were the dogs there? Make an inference.
2. What is the main idea of the story?

Other potential discussion questions for teachers to lead:

1. Are the factors that caused black bears to become rare in 1902 still an issue in the 21st century?
2. What are the components of wildlife habitat?

Vocabulary Words

1. predator
2. rare
3. habitat
4. journey
5. refuse
6. capture
7. shout
8. avoid

Name: _____

Mississippi's Teddy Bear

Vocabulary Words

Use context clues from the text to write definitions for the following vocabulary words:

predator: _____

rare: _____

habitat: _____

journey: _____

refuse: _____

capture: _____

shout: _____

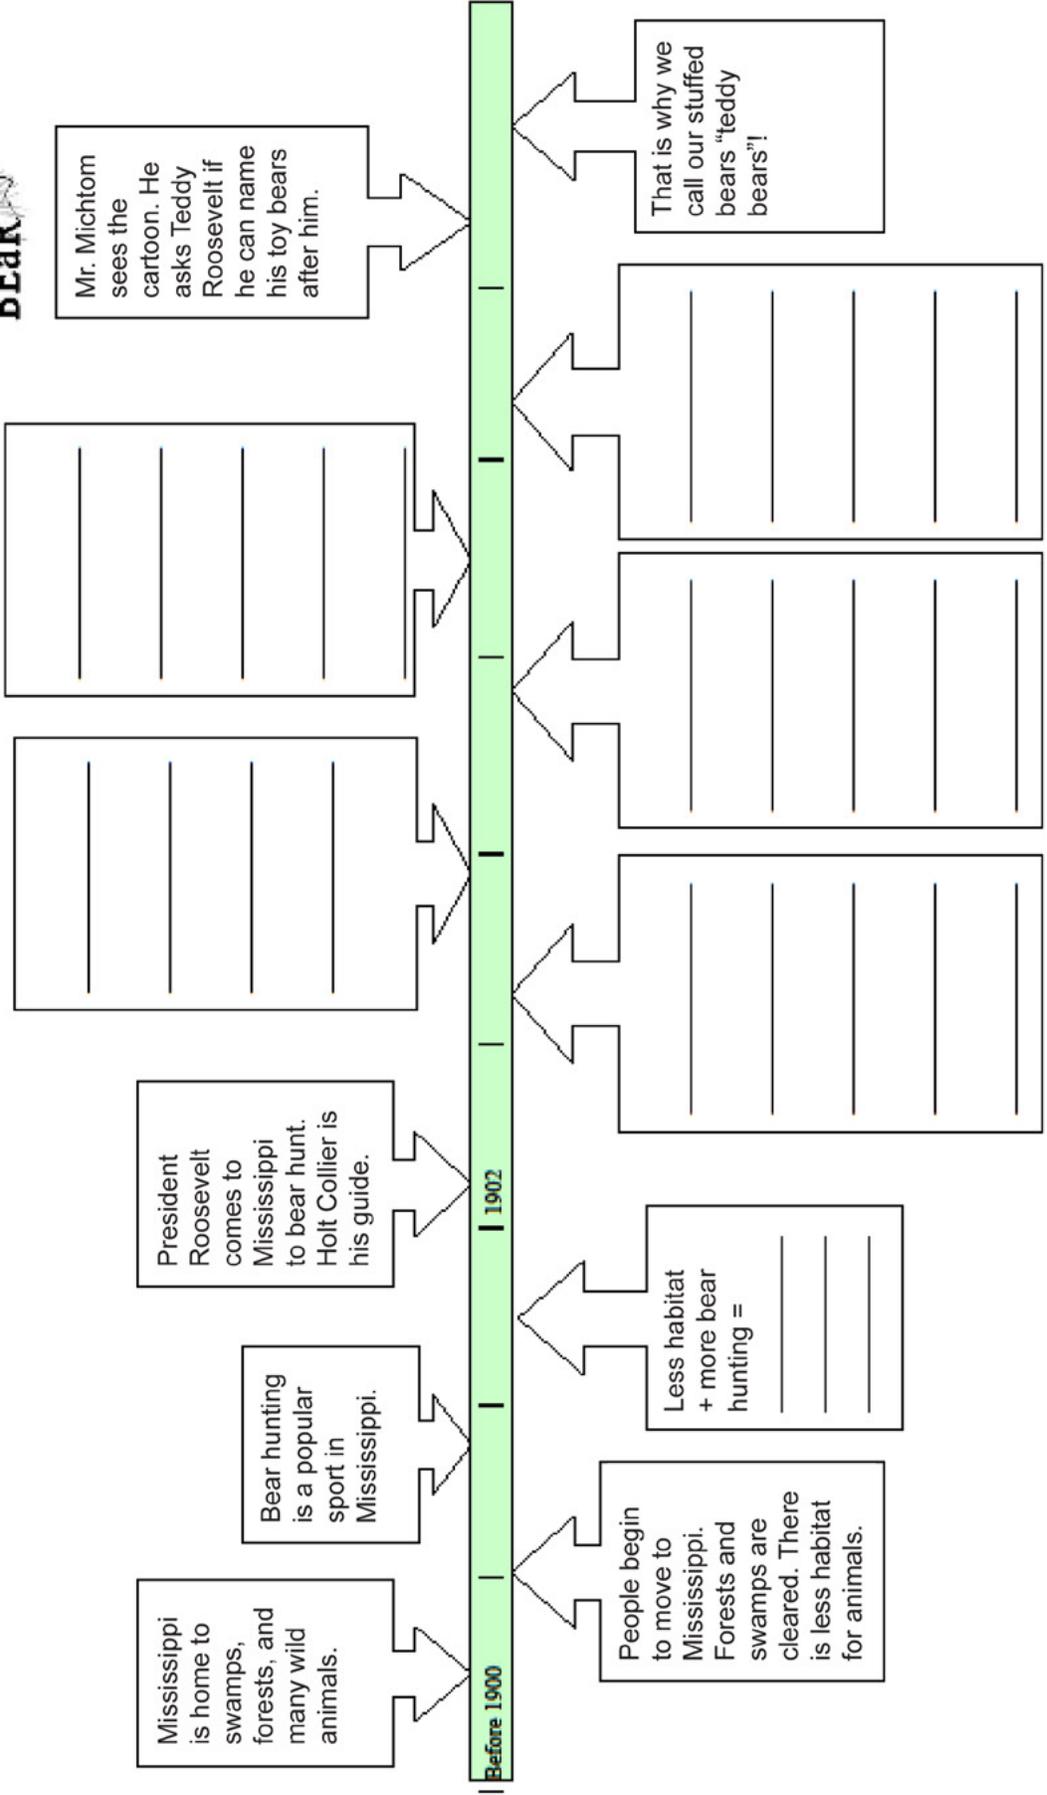

avoid: _____

Name: _____

Mississippi's Teddy Bear Timeline

Instructions: After reading the story "Mississippi's Teddy Bear," fill in the blank spaces on the timeline.

Correlations to Mississippi Educational Standards

2016 Mississippi College- and Career-Readiness Standards for English Language Arts Standards for Third Grade:

RL.3.1, RL.3.2, RL.3.3, RL3.4, RL.3.6

SL.3.1, SL.3.3

L.3.1, L.3.2, L.3.3, L.3.4

2018 Mississippi College- and Career-Readiness Standards for Science for Third Grade:

L.3.4.2, L.3.4.4.

2018 Mississippi College- and Career-Readiness Standards for the Social Studies for Third Grade:

G.3.1.

More about Bears and BEaR

Black bears play an integral role in Mississippi's rich cultural past, from the famous 1902 President Roosevelt hunt that led to the creation of the teddy bear, to the legacy of some of the greatest bear hunters of all time.

Bears once roamed throughout the state, and three subspecies are recognized: the American black bear, the Florida black bear, and the Louisiana black bear. Largely because of habitat loss and fragmentation, Mississippi's black bear population suffered greatly during the late 1800s to early 1900s. Because of more recent habitat improvement, the bear population in Mississippi is slowly recovering and is now estimated to be about 200 animals.

Founded in 2004, the Bear Education and Restoration (BEaR) Group of Mississippi is a 501(c)3, non-profit corporation dedicated to conserving healthy populations of black bears throughout Mississippi. This is done through education, sustainable solutions, and creative and respectful partnerships with landowners, agencies, educators, and the public. This curriculum is the result of one such partnership.

More information on Mississippi bears can be found at <http://www.msbear.org/for-teachers/>.

M2086 (POD-06-20)

By Leslie M. Burger, Assistant Extension Professor, Wildlife, Fisheries, & Aquaculture, and Debora Waz, Conservation Educator, Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries, and Parks.

Copyright 2020 by Mississippi State University. All rights reserved. This publication may be copied and distributed without alteration for nonprofit educational purposes provided that credit is given to the Mississippi State University Extension Service.

Produced by Agricultural Communications.

Mississippi State University is an equal opportunity institution. Discrimination in university employment, programs, or activities based on race, color, ethnicity, sex, pregnancy, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation, genetic information, status as a U.S. veteran, or any other status protected by applicable law is prohibited. Questions about equal opportunity programs or compliance should be directed to the Office of Compliance and Integrity, 56 Morgan Avenue, P.O. 6044, Mississippi State, MS 39762, (662) 325-5839.

Extension Service of Mississippi State University, cooperating with U.S. Department of Agriculture. Published in furtherance of Acts of Congress, May 8 and June 30, 1914. GARY B. JACKSON, Director